

"the book that changed me"

JU faculty pecha kucha 2019

Faculty are often identified with bookish professional pursuits and oftentimes have an extensive background as readers--perhaps more so than we feel we have time to enjoy in the present. Many of us can look back to particular titles that cultivated an interest in our field, or simply cultivated us as human people. When you think about books--these things that Stephen King refers to as "uniquely portable magic"--which comes to mind as having been really special to you?

We will open the spring term with a faculty colloquium that takes the form of pecha kucha presentations: each speaker will be accompanied by a slide show comprising 20 slides shown for 20 seconds each, about the book that changed them.

Interested in taking part? Of course you are! Know other faculty who ought to share their stories? Of course you do! Please send nominations for speakers (yourself & others) to Jhennifer by the last Friday before finals week (Nov. 30) so she can finalize the program prior to Christmas break.

for more info on the format, visit:

www.pechakucha.org

to register your interest in taking part, or to nominate a colleague--or both!--contact Jhennifer (JAmundson@JudsonU.edu) by Fri., Nov. 30